SUNDAY SERVICES.

The services in the Tabernacle on Sunday afternoon were opened by the choir singing the hymn beginning:

Ever long the wall will stand in twain,
The King descend with all his train;
The earth shall shake with awful fright,
And all creation fill his might.

Prayer by Elder A. H. Raleigh.
He died the great Redeemer died,
And Israel's daughters wept around;
A solemn darkness veiled the sky;
And sudden lightning shook the ground.

ELDER C. W. PETERSON addressed the congregation, occupying the entire afternoon. He began by referring to the administration of the sacrament, which he said was partaken of by the saints in remembrance of the Lord Jesus, and in the expectation that the Savior would come again, as king of Israel, where all would be subject to him. In partaking of the emblems their minds were carried backward and also forward. The bread was a token of the broken body of Christ, and the water was the token of the blood, the sacrament being a witness that they had taken on them the name of Jesus Christ; that they will serve him in all things, preferring him to all other things, and believing that if they do this, all else would be added. The administration of the sacrament was a solemn ordinance, and on those occasions the saints should call in their scattered thoughts, concentrating them on things. There was no occasion for any one to go astray for want of instruction. There were meetings on Sundays and Sunday evenings, the Sabbath school for the children, and meetings during the week, when they could be taught in the things of God. Then they had the privilege of the gift of the Holy Ghost, enabling them to discover the things of God, the things of the earth, and the things of the life of the spirit of the sun. The light or spirit of God was for all, not being confined to any sect or individual. It was the light of life, the light of the world, the intelligence told about in the Book of Job. If we have any intelligence it came from God. If people would be guided by the light of God it would lead them up to the fountain of light, and enable them to commune with God, and show them how to walk in the straight and narrow path. It was because the people of the world did not do this in that light that they were unable to walk in the path of God. They loved darkness rather than light, and having free agency, they could choose between good and evil. The Lord had made this so that he might judge all according to their conduct upon the earth. All were responsible to God for their deportment, and he would judge them accordingly. He had sent us here for an experience and education, but the time would come when all would have to go before him for judgment. At different times God had sent inspired men to instruct his children and lead them back into his presence. But the people of the world generally had rejected those holy men. Jesus said which of the prophets have not your fathers slain? Even Jesus was rejected, as had been the prophets in all ages of the world. They have been stoned, persecuted and put to death. Some say if they had lived anciently they would have received the prophets and heeded their deliverances from darkness. How would they have known that even Jesus was the son of God? There was only one way, namely, by revelation, and if one did not believe in revelation, how could he have known the Savior? No man could find out that Jesus was the Christ, except by the spirit of the Holy Ghost. One might believe in him, but he could not know it, nor could any knowledge of the things of God come except by the spirit of the Holy Ghost. The gift of the Holy Ghost was the greatest boon that God could confer upon man, for without it he could not obtain a knowledge of God. The only way in which the gift could be obtained was as God had pointed out in the Scriptures. First, man must believe in God. Faith must be quickened in his heart. He must believe in Jesus Christ as the son of God, the redeemer of the world. The next principle was repentance. He did not mean weeping and mourning and throwing oneself into the anxious sea, but a fixed determination to cast aside evil from his life. The next principle was baptism—burial in the water, and being raised therefrom by one having the authority from God to administer in that ordinance. Baptism did not wash away the sin, but the ordinance must be obeyed, as it had been by Christ himself. The man who baptized had authority to baptize, and if he had not, the ceremony would have been void, just as it would be to-day if one should baptize without the authority from God. Christ received his priesthood from his father, and he conferred it upon his apostles, telling them to go forth and preach the gospel to all the world, and promising that those who believed and were baptized should be saved, and those who rejected it would be damned. The Holy Ghost was conferred through another form, namely, the laying on of hands by one having the authority to perform the ceremony. In ancient times, when one received this spirit, he had an inward witness or conviction that he was accepted of God, and the same was the case to-day. The same gifts would follow to-day as they had in ancient times, and it was said the gifts were not conferred to-day, but if God and his laws were unchangeable, why should not the things be now as anciently? In this age a young man came forth and testified that he had been duly commissioned to preach the gospel upon the earth. The commission was that all Christendom was stirred up against him. But he went forth as commanded, and when he spoke, his words were filled with the spirit of God. Those whose hearts were prepared, received and believed his testimony, and the same gifts and blessings followed those who believed, who were baptized and had hands laid upon them as in ancient days. Wherever he and his disciples went, they preached the same gospel, and it had the same effect of uniting people to the spirit of God. They came up here where they could live their religion. The young prophet was hunted and persecuted from city to city, and finally arrested. He was rejected by men like the ancient prophets, because he came to the people who loved darkness better than light, and who therefore acted wickedly. His blood stains the land of the nation, and calls to heaven for vengeance. The same spirit prevailed against the present leader of the church by those who professed to be believers in Christ and the Bible. But the gospel would continue to be preached to the world as a witness, and the honest in heart would be gathered out, when Christ would come, which time was not far distant. This was not the work of men, but of God, and would prevail, no matter what might be the opposition.

The choir sang the anthem, "Jerusalem, my Glorious Home," and Elder Jos. L. Heywood pronounced the benediction.
